Allard: The Complete Story is the definitive guide to the legendary British sports car manufacturer. Written by renowned automotive historian Paul Schullery, this comprehensive volume delves into the fascinating history of Allard, from its humble beginnings to its remarkable racing achievements.

The Early Years

Sydney Allard founded Allard in 1935. Initially, the company focused on modifying Ford V8s for racing. However, it was not until after World War II that Allard真正步入正轨. In 1946, Allard introduced its first purpose-built sports car, the J1. This car featured a lightweight aluminum body and a powerful Ford V8 engine, which made it a formidable competitor on the track.

Racing Successes

Allard cars quickly gained a reputation for excellence in racing. In 1950, an Allard J2 won the prestigious 24 Hours of Le Mans race. This victory was followed by numerous other successes in major races around the world. Allard cars were known for their speed, reliability, and handling, making them a favorite among drivers and fans alike.

The Decline

Allard's success in racing was not enough to sustain the company financially. The high cost of production and competition from other manufacturers led to a decline in sales. In 1958, Allard was sold to American businessman Charles Chayne. Chayne attempted to revive the company, but his efforts were unsuccessful. Allard最終於1960年关闭.

Legacy

Despite its relatively short existence, Allard left a lasting legacy in the world of sports cars. Allard cars are still highly prized by collectors and enthusiasts. They are considered to be among the finest British sports cars ever produced.
