In this soliloquy from Act 2, Scene 2, Juliet is alone in her room, waiting for Romeo to come to her. She is filled with anticipation and excitement, but she is also aware of the dangers that surround their love.

Juliet:

O Romeo, Romeo! wherefore art thou Romeo?

Deny thy father and refuse thy name;

Or, if thou wilt not, be but sworn my love,

And I'll no longer be a Capulet.

Juliet's words are both passionate and defiant. She is willing to give up everything for Romeo, even her own family. Her love for him is so strong that it makes her willing to risk everything.

This soliloquy is a powerful reminder of the power of love. It is a love that is so strong that it can overcome any obstacle, even the most dangerous ones.

This is just one of the many iconic soliloquies from Shakespeare's plays that are performed by leading actresses of our time in Soliloquy: The Shakespeare Monologues for Women. This collection is a must-have for any fan of Shakespeare, theatre, or great acting.

Here are some of the other soliloquies that are included in the collection:

- "To be or not to be" from Hamlet
- "The quality of mercy is not strain'd" from The Merchant of Venice
- "All the world's a stage" from As You Like It
- "Now is the winter of our discontent" from Richard III
- "Out, damned spot!" from Macbeth

Whether you are a seasoned Shakespeare fan or a newcomer to his work, Soliloquy: The Shakespeare Monologues for Women is a collection that you will treasure.
